

National Republican

W. J. MURTAUGH, Editor and Vice President

The Republican has a Larger Circulation than any other Morning Paper in the District of Columbia.READING MATTER ON EVERY PAGE.*PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING

(Sundays excepted)

BY W. J. MURTAUGH,

(Fronting Pennsylvania Avenue).

And is furnished to subscribers (by carriers) at 20

Mill subscribers, $10 per year; $100 for six months, and $150 for three months, invariably in advance.

RATES OF ADVERTISING:

Twenty-five cents per line. Advertising space by the word of "For Sale on Rent," "Wanted," "Lost" and "Found," and "Personal," twelve and a half cents per line.

THE WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

is published every Saturday morning, and is furnished to subscribers at the following rates: One copy per week, $10; two copies one year, $120; one copy per month, $15; two copies, $30.

All communications, whether of a general or a special character, may be addressed to W. J. MURTAUGH, Proprietor, NATIONAL REPUBLICAN, Washington, D. C.

On the third page will be found an interesting article on public school interests, which will repay perusal.

The letter containing Treasurer Spinner's position in regard to "back pay," printed in other columns, is from the pen of a distinguished lawyer and jurist.

THE MATTER OF REMOVING NIGHT SOIL IN THE DISTRICT

still agitates the Board of Health.

In our local column, this morning, will be found an interesting discussion on the various plans, to which attention is directed.

THE LATEST ACCOUNTS FROM MASSACHUSETTS

give the victory in the election of delegates to the State convention to Gen. Butler. His opponents, however, are pressing him pretty closely. Either way there is not a difference of more than a score of votes.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

is the chief organ of the Democratic party, is endeavoring to persuade itself that the Republican party is on the decline; that, in fact, it is already dead.

The World might as well assume itself to be in any other.

THE NEW YORK EVENING POST

has a funny theory about the decoration of the remains of the unfortunate "Beau Hickman." It says: "It is probably the fact, however, that there was no intention of showing disrespect to what was left of poor Hickman, but rather a selfish desire of showing his honor. He had lived a virtuous life, and in many ways had acquired some of kind of fame, and undoubtedly some of respectability, too. This is all very nice, but most people would very naturally object to being buried that way. The Post should not allow its Shakespearean imagination to make it seem ridiculous."

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE WASHINGTON INDEPENDENT

of the St. Louis press says:

"Washington has been requiring the railroad monopoly in a pecuniary provision for the railroads in the system, it is not for what the outside world cannot but consider it a partisan paper."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE WASHINGTON INDEPENDENT

of the St. Louis press says:

"Washington has been requiring the railroad monopoly in a pecuniary provision for the railroads in the system, it is not for what the outside world cannot but consider it a partisan paper."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered

that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of men who voted against Horace Greeley, the Whig's candidate for President, and for General Grant, the inconsistency and brazen effrontry of its pretensions is at once apparent.

THE RICHMOND WHIG

urges its friends in Virginia to the effect, that, so far as we are concerned, the Whigs routed at the Wilderness."

In other and plainer words, the Whig accepts the pending political contest in the Old Dominion as a revival of the issues of the late rebellion. Kemper, Withers and Daniels lead the Confederate forces, while Hughes, Ransdell and Fuqua lead the Union hosts. Yet the Whig pretends to be neutral, while the world outside cannot but consider it a partisan paper.

Gen. Grant. When it is remembered that the enemy "routed at the Wilderness" is composed of